

Northeast Committee on the Environment

The Northeast Committee on the Environment (NECOE) is represented by the top environmental officers across seven states. NECOE meets quarterly and meetings are administered by the Coalition of Northeastern Governors staff. In addition to the states, regional organizations are invited to participate.

In September, Portland, Maine was the perfect venue to host fall's 2017 NECOE Meeting with ideal foliage and a city bustling with new energy and infrastructure. Here, New England's environmental and energy commissioners came together with EPA Region 1 representatives and regional organizations: Northeast States for Coordinated Air Use Management (NESCAUM), New England Interstate Water Pollution Control Commission (NEIWPCC), and Northeast Waste Management Officials' Association (NEWMOA), to discuss collaboration and how the region can continue to push forward.

NECOE will be meeting again over the winter season to continue collaboration and forge ahead with environmental and energy goals for the region.
